Civil Air Patrol cites confusion as main enemy

Winged Volunteers

As temperatures soared to 86 degrees, Civil Air Patrol pilots cruised over the foothill area from Azusa to Upland Saturday in search of "flood victims."

They were having some minor problems. Some of the "victims" failed to show up for the training exercises coordinated from Brackett Field in La Verne and Cable Airport in Upland.

Civil Air Patrol officials finally rounded up a group of simulated victims, but later discovered they didn't have enough senior ground crews to rescue them.

Such is the nature of calamity.

Roughly 200 air patrol volunteers, mostly pilots, gathered at Cable Airport and Brackett Field from dawn to dusk for a training drill that had most of the land hypothetically underwater.

According to the scenario, a massive cold front flooded the area, destroyed storm drains and wiped out flood control plains.

However, the uncomfortable heat made it a little difficult to pretend the area was awash in rain runoff.

But the base at Cable was swarming with air patrol commanders, strategists and pilots attempting to accomplish the numerous "tasks" required by the drill.

Officials tested new computerized communications systems, point-to-point radio operations, victim searches and other emergency tactics and equipment that would be used during an actual flood.

"Hopefully our crews will make their mistakes now and not in an actual situation," said Harold Cunningham of the Civil Air Patrol, also known as the Air Force Auxiliary.

Only a few coordinators knew exactly what the pilots and ground crews would be asked to do and there were many surprises planned for the group of volunteers.

For instance, the radio base at Cable was soon "flooded," forcing pilots and commanders to scamper for higher ground.

All this activity was mostly hidden to valley residents, who probably noticed nothing more than a few low-flying planes Saturday.

During a real emergency, the efforts of the volunteer patrol would be splashed across the front pages of newspapers and announced in radio and television newscasts.

Ironically, the attention comes at an unwelcome time for rescue crews.

Air Force Auxiliary Capt. Mark Cartwright says the press often hampers emergency services — as in the case of the Coalinga earthquake.

"The press took over the airfield. It took us 48 hours to get the unnecessary people out so that we could get the necessary people in," said Cartwright.

In a word, the patrol's main enemy is confusion. Emergency services workers must be able to organize themselves and restore order in the midst of catastrophe.

And the best way to do this is by practice.

Cartwright said the patrol stages about four drills a year. Volunteers supply their own aircraft, four-wheel drive vehicles and most other equipment. They work with law enforcement agencies, the California Highway Patrol, the county sheriff departments and other groups.

Drills are conducted to hone their search-and-rescue techniques.

The groups also explore new technology, using such items as the computer-linked radio system.

Air patrol members are working with a new system that would provide pilots with computer printouts of destinations, thus reducing on time and confusion.

Once they are dispatched, Air Force auxiliary planes can fly below federal standards, low enough to "read automobile license plates," said Cartwright. "Now, that's low."

The planes cruise at 90 to 110 mph, compared to the 550 to 600 mph logged by commercial airliners. They can also land in small areas about the length of a football field.

While drill coordinators mapped out the course for pilots at Cable Airport, ground rescue units were dispatched from the nearby Brackett Field.

Communications between the two private airports were conducted by radio from a van in the Brackett field parking lot and a radio base in the air patrol bungalow at Cable Airport.

The radio frequencies were disrupted momentarily by a series of shrill blurps identified by listeners as the sound of an Emergency Locator Transmitter. The locator is built into the plane and sounds off whenever the craft is jarred. The device is intended to help locate downed airplanes.

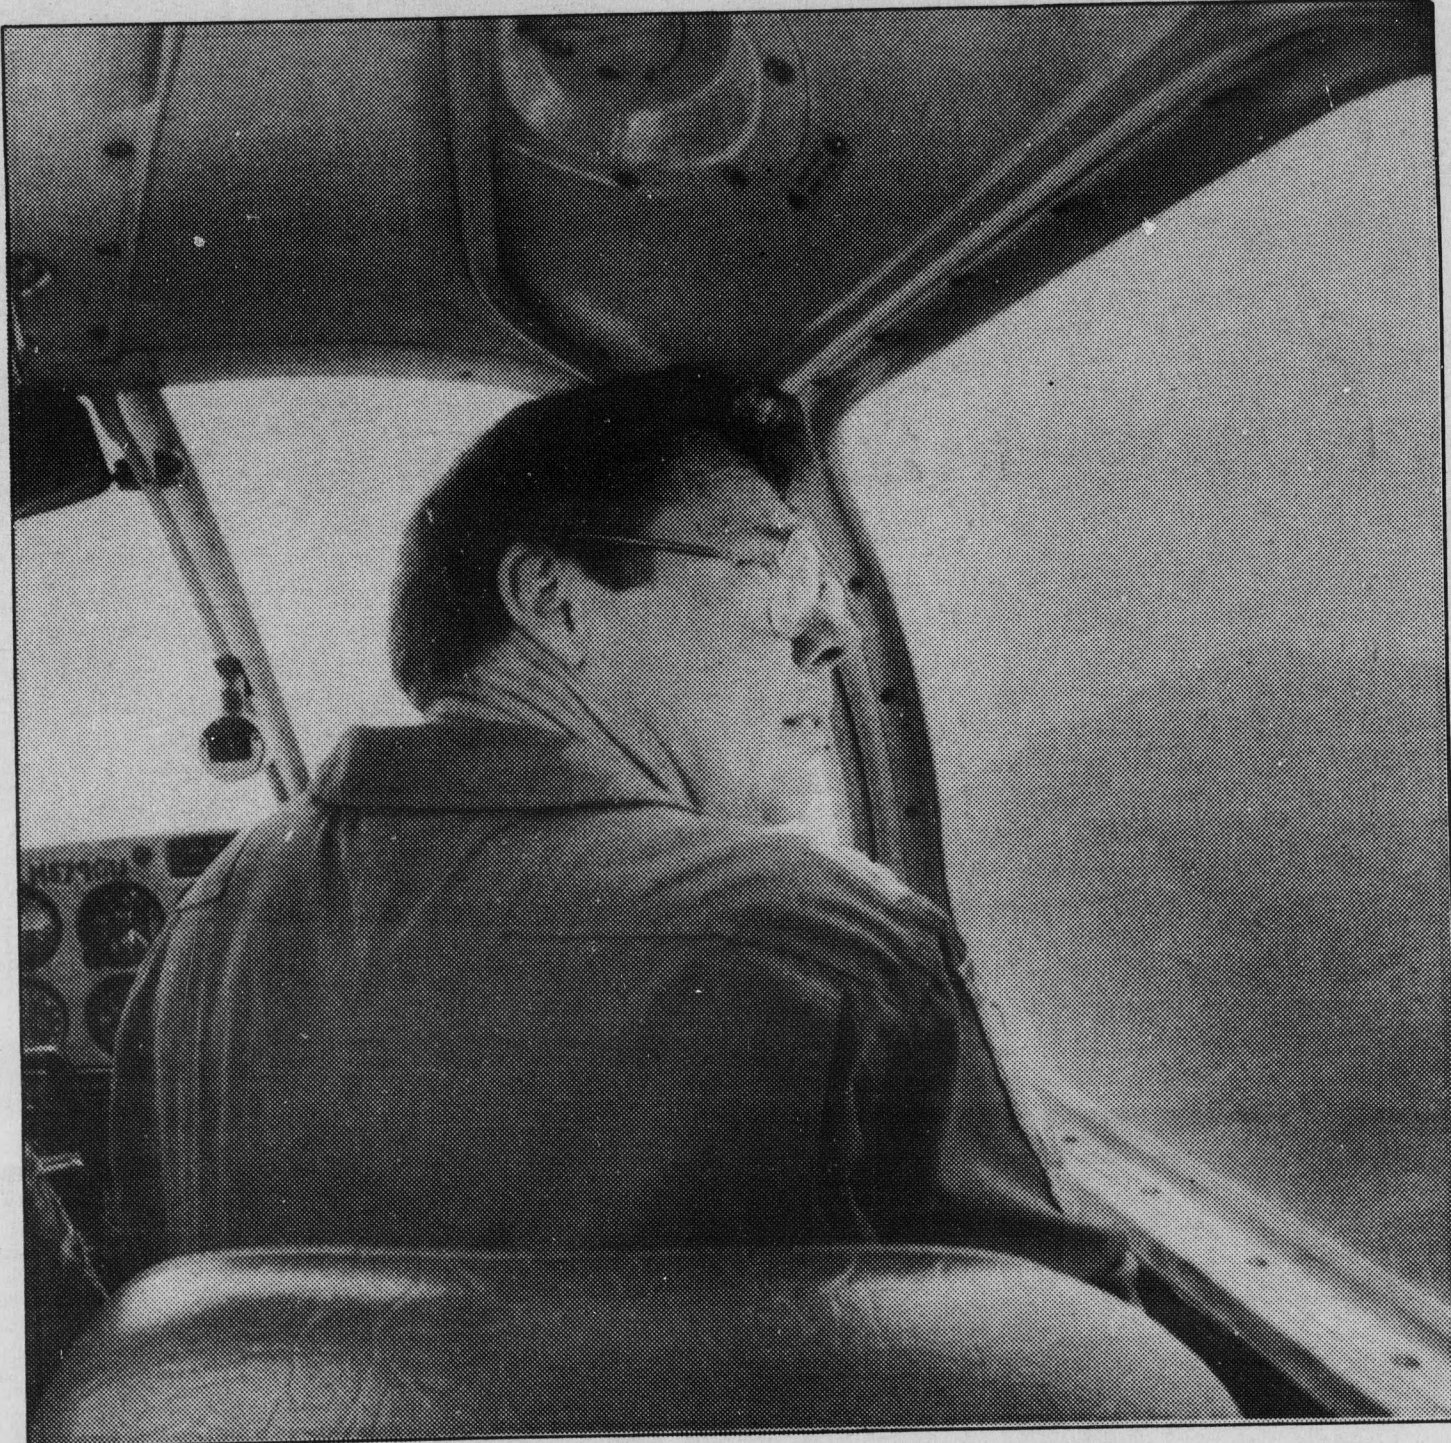

The funny thing about this particular alarm was that it was not part of the drill.

"We got a real one," came the call from the lobby of Brackett Field.

"Nine out of ten times it's a false alarm," said Cartwright. "But when a false alarm is going and another plane actually crashes, it is very hard to differentiate between the two."

Consequently, it is important to keep the channel clear, he explained.

Air patrol trainees discovered the alarm was coming from a plane stored within a hangar. □

Local girls get kick out of Rams

By Terri Tirella

Is the West Valley becoming a training ground for Rams Cheerleaders?

Ten percent of the this year's squad will be local lovelies from Upland and Rancho Cucamonga.

Donna Allen, formerly Miss Rancho Cucamonga, has retained a position on the entertainment unit this year and will be joined by two Upland women who are new to the squad.

Tracy Kupferer and Cyndie Donovan have more in common than making the cheerleading squad — they both live in the same house and according to Carol Kupferer, share the same positive attitude.

"They're both really sweet and it shows, especially in pageants — it all comes through when they're on stage," Carol said.

The girls live with Carol and Stan Kupferer in Upland.

"They get along better than sisters and have so much in common, it's funny. They're both pretty and have a good attitude and love to dance," she said. "They like the same kind of boys, clothes, and like to be in pageants."

According to Carol, her husband Stan was more excited than the girls when the cheerleader results were announced. "We've never been football fans, but this year we're getting season passes," she said.

Tracy said both her older brother and sister were active in sports and her father would coach them. He had to realign his thinking when it came to her cheerleading, dancing and beauty pageant competitions.

"Tracy was in drill team and we never missed anything (activity). He called the drill team leader the coach," Carol said.

"He's (Stan) really good at pageants, he's real objective and can tell you what you did good and bad," Tracy said. Something she did well was kicks during the Rams competition.

During the final cut, the girls sat in the back row with other contestants. "We decided to sit in back so if we didn't make it, we could sneak out," Tracy said.

Competition isn't new for the girls. Cyndie has won the Miss Southern California Belle title, and was selected Miss Pomona Valley, Summer Queen and first runner up to Miss California Venus USA.

Tracy is Miss Riverside County and Junior Miss Inland Empire. "The girls usually place near each other. In the Miss Riverside pageant, Tracy was Miss Riverside and Cyndie was first runner-up," Carol said.

Both girls attend Mt. San Antonio College, take dancing classes and modeling for different agencies. Both work at local restaurants, Tracy at Cask 'n Cleaver, Cyndie at Magnolia's Peach.

And while both are competitive contestants, they are not competitive with one another. "Tracy's number was called first, she got real excited but we didn't start jumping up and down until they called mine," Cyndie said.

"We said 'Please let both of us (make the team) or neither of us,'" she said.

The girls competed with 400 to 500 "gorgeous" girls. "At least 15 were veterans (from the squad) and there are only 32 (cheerleaders)," Tracy said.

Allen was among the contestants congratulating the two Upland residents.

Reactions from the girls' boyfriends were different. "My boyfriend was real excited and was calling all his friends," Tracy said.

Once-prominent fuzzy fruit now hard to find

By Tony Saavedra

Tis' hard times indeed for those with a hankering for the large, yellow-fleshed, sweet So-Cala peach, once prominent in local orchards.

The peach, developed in the 1930s by Ontario rancher Wilhemina Barnes, is all but extinct. There are now only a few trees in the garden of her daughter's San Antonio Heights home.

"If you want a peach — you see me," says Althea Barnes, 81, fingering the fuzzy young peaches on the trees in front of her house at Beck Street.

These are reportedly the last of the trees bearing the fruit once grown in several West Valley orchards and distributed through Los Angeles wholesalers.

"This is not an agricultural area anymore. All of our orchards are gone and there's nothing but houses in Ontario now," laments Barnes.

The ranch, as well as the house built by Barnes' father in 1909, also fell to progress. Both were purchased in 1957 by Chaffey Union High School District — under the threat of condemnation — to make way for a new school that was never constructed.

The house, built by the bare hands of C.C. Barnes, a South Dakota goldminer, was later set aflame to help train local firefighters.

Twenty years earlier, the ranch had brought the glitter and glamour of Hollywood to Ontario by serving as a shooting location for the movie "Gold Is Where You Find It."

Olivia De Havilland and George Brent where among the company of 100 brought by Warners Brothers to the orchard.

Just as Hollywood has changed, so has Ontario.

Barnes doesn't seem bitter over the demise of her mother's special breed of freestone peaches or the destruction of the old house.

After all, she has volumes of newspaper clippings and photographs beneath the clear plastic pages of her photo albums.

And she still has a few of her peach trees.

CHURCHES

En Agape puts emphasis on Father's love

By Terri Tirella

On the surface, En Agape Fellowship seems like a fairly average church.

En Agape offers adult fellowship; children's Christian education; food ministries; music; prayer; marriage enrichment; men's and women's fellowships; youth groups; and "Song of Peace", a ministry of dance. You can find similar activities at almost any house of worship.

But the church, located at 9101 19th St., Alta Loma, also goes a bit beyond the usual. And church leaders hope their special program will give participants a compassion that transcends the normal as well.

En Agape is the home of En Agape Counselor Training School, an emotional and social re-education program for potential counselors and others.

Pastor Harold Dewberry's ministry has been used in many parts of the world and he has 20 years of ministerial experience. He was founder and director of Teen Challenge in Sydney, Australia, his native land.

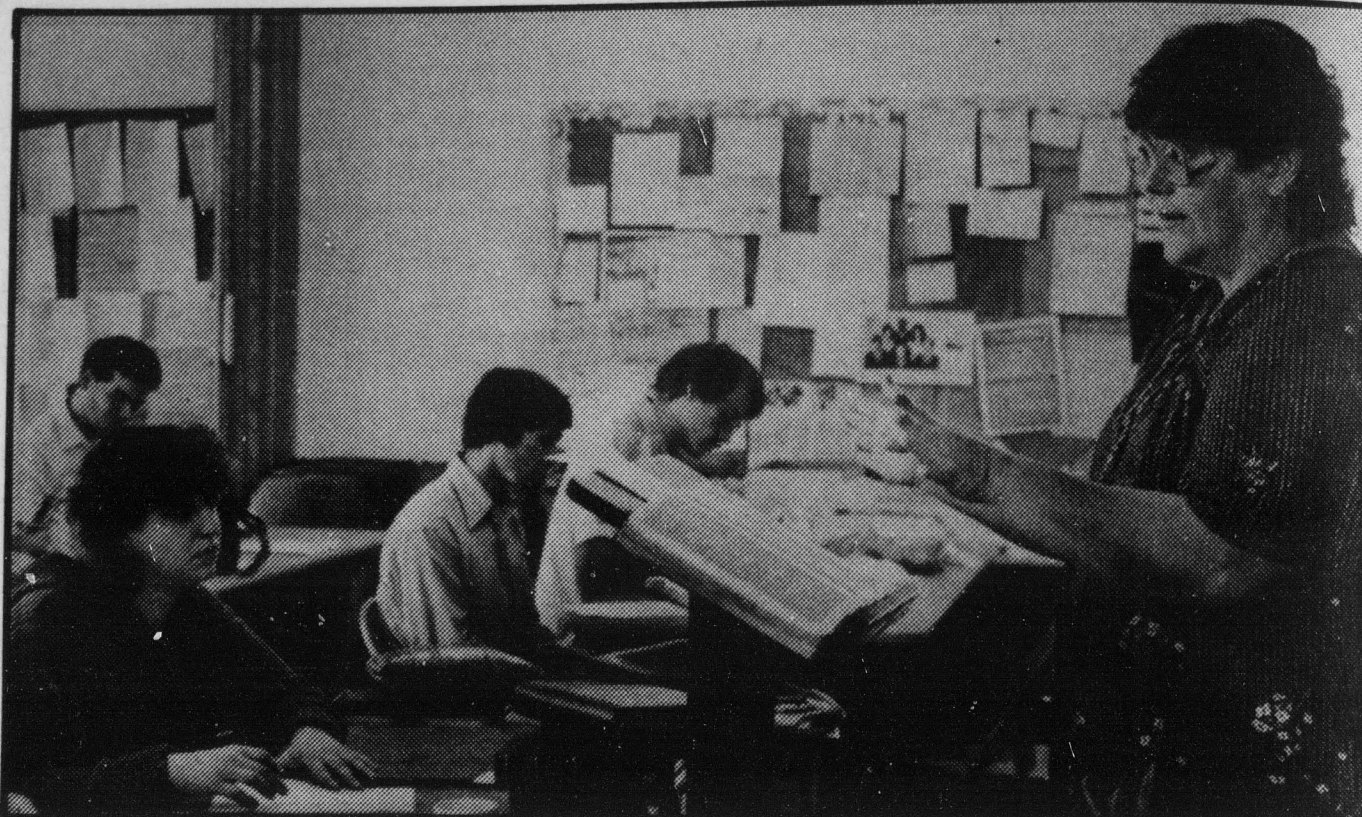

Along with the counselor training school program are two "healing homes" which house troubled people, as well as students in the En Agape school. "It's not a rehabilitation (program) but re-education; teaching how to respond to conflicts of life," Pastor Dewberry said.

The basic philosophy of En Agape Counselor Training School "comes from the word of God. Who shows people how to turn things from negatives of life to positives," Dewberry said.

"We're not trying to just educate, but also change (troubled students') character," he said.

When people suffer pain and traumas in life their personalities become distorted, according to Dewberry. "They lose the image of Christ. He is the model for facing crises in life."

The school aids students in dealing with painful memories of the past. They are taught to minister to themselves as well as others in the spiritual, mental and physical areas of their lives.

"Many have painful memories or distorted memories where they may have believed a lie about themselves, or have forgotten memories where their minds block out past causes of emotional problems," Dewberry explained. "Through actions (in the healing homes and counseling school), we try to harmonize and integrate (the troubled person) into a whole person."

"En Agape" is Greek, meaning "in the Father's love," Dewberry said. "And that is our theme. Our message is unconditional love," he said.

En Agape Fellowship plans to have a "Drop In" counseling center. Participants "can come in and get counseled over a cup of coffee; letting them express their hurts or pains in a non-threatening environment," he said.

"We encourage people to come to church. We show them by our lifestyle, how to live (in

Waitress trains to start a new life

Dee Cosentino had been a waitress for 33 years and was working in an Upland restaurant when she caught one foot in a glass rack and turned her life upside-down.

Her knees and back were wrenched in the September 1981 accident. After five surgeries, the Upland resident has learned to live with constant pain. "Pretty soon it becomes part of you,"

she observes. The pain does not permit her to sit for long, nor to stand for long.

Her career as a waitress was ended. "I loved it; I almost cried" when she realized she would never be able to return to restaurant work, she recalls. "Two things I knew I was good at. I knew I was a good mother and I knew I was a good waitress."

Later, Cosentino did cry. A lot. With her four children grown, her work as a waitress over, her body fraught with pain, the future seemed bleak.

But her tears could not dissolve reality. Divorced for 14 years, she had to learn a new trade. A career

En Agape program's something special

this world) and still have sanity and peace," he said.

The church is non-denominational and is governed by elders who live locally. Dewberry said a strong emphasis is placed on new birth (a born-again experience) and conforming to the character of Christ from that new birth. It is a charismatic church experience "emphasizing all the gifts of the Holy Spirit, words of knowledge, words of wisdom and prophecy," he said.

Dewberry said students must be full participants in the church. "Students who live in homes want to get involved in healing the community. (The troubled ones) need to recover from rejection and can't relate to family."

He said the success rate of the program with troubled people is 93 percent. "We have an overbalance of well people to those emotionally destroyed in the healing homes ... it's like a huge Christian family," he said.

About 15 nations are represented among the students at En Agape Counseling Training School, ranging in age from 20 years old and older. "Ministers, lay people, students want to get involved in the counseling ministry, the majority actually have a burden to share with other people," Dewberry said.

Shari Morgan, director of En Agape House, oversees the home with 15 students. Some of the students have emotional problems.

"Some (of the students) give strength to the others and learn from the ones who are sick how to help them," she said.

"We see a lot of emotional healing in (student's) lives," Morgan said. "They're better equipped to go out into the world and maintain a balance and stability they didn't have before."

Part of the counseling training includes participation in growth groups. "We get to know each other and become bonded, trusting, so we can share deep feelings," Diane Merriman said. "We share in a small group what we couldn't share outside."

Merriman came to the school from England. Francoise Jordon has attended En Agape school for 10 months. She is training to become a staff member in a healing home in her native Switzerland. "I wanted to be trained to help people in a deeper way," she said.

Jordon said she heard about the program while in Europe. "It's in a church situation. I wanted to belong to a church, be covered by a church ... we don't have anything like this (the En Agape program) in Europe, not even books to read."

Rosemary Tellezgiron found En Agape in a different way. "I was looking for a church and was driving down 19th Street. I went to go to another church and turned around and went back (to En Agape). I have been there since then," she said.

Tellezgiron was born in Mexico City and lived in Illinois before her husband died. She came to Rancho Cucamonga to live with her family here.

After counseling Tellezgiron, Dewberry suggested she enroll in the school program. "My heart wasn't going that way, I thought it was going to be a waste of time," she said.

She decided to do it anyway. "I've learned so many things ... how to deal with people and how to help (me)."

The group of children ages 3 to 14 will perform May 31 at 7 p.m. in the auditorium at Upland Elementary School, 601 N. Fifth Ave.

The children will perform separately in their respective age groups and then combine for the finale numbers.

The Children's Section of the Upland Public Library will begin its 1984 Summer Reading Program on an Olympic theme, "Go For the Gold," June 25.

Registration for the eight-week program will begin June 15 and will focus on reading with a board game format of reading guidance. There's still some room left for youngsters at YMCA camp

By Joy Sommer

Although pleased with the response so far, Therese Keane, West End YMCA camp director, says there is still room in many of the camps being offered by the Y.

The perennially popular Camp Fox, an all boys camp on Catalina Island, the new girls Catalina Camp and the leadership camp at Oakes are the only ones with a full compliment of campers, Keane reported at a Tuesday meeting.

"I'm confident we'll see these all fill up," she said, adding, many people seem to be unaware they can still sign up.

The popular Camp Oakes is about 75 percent filled, while Camp Lackey (26 sign-ups, 130 maximum) and Lackey Outpost (four sign-ups, 12 maximum) have ample room.

Teen Camp at Bluff Lake in Big Bear is a new camp this year designed for both boys and girls 13 to 15. "It was formed to give the kids who were too old for Oakes but didn't want to go into leadership a place to go for fun," Keane said.

So far response has been light — 13 sign-ups for a 100 spots. "We really want to provide something for the junior high age kids to go to and have a good time," Keane said.

In addition to regular camp activities, Camp

Preschool Storytime will be held on Thursday mornings at 10:30 a.m. for ages 3 to 6. Storytime programs include a return performance by the puppet lady, June 28; Gary Guitler, July 26; and a safety program featuring Ronald McDonald, July 5. The competitiveness Tracy and Cyndie have separates them from their other friends. "We have friends who think about doing something neat, but won't do it ... We hear about something and do it. We have more confidence," Tracy said.

"But then we get there and think 'what are we doing here,' Cyndie said. "But we're willing to try anything. Everything is a learning experience — whether you do good or not." □

Young people victimized by accidents

Automobile accidents are the leading cause of death for children and young adults from 1-34 years of age. In 1983 in San Bernardino County there were 1,221 injuries and 14 fatalities to children and teens under 15; as a result of automobile accidents.

These grim statistics can be changed if parents use a car seat for the child under 4 years and buckle their older child and themselves in a car seat. The California Highway Patrol warned. The CHP estimates that 80-90 percent of the children who die in car crashes could have lived and 70 percent of those injured would have escaped harm had they been buckled up in a car seat.

According to the Highway Patrol in 1983, four of the five fatalities in San Bernardino County for children under 4 would have been prevented if the child was properly restrained in a car seat.

In recognition of the importance of car seats, California law requires children under 4 years or weighing 40 pounds or less to be restrained in a car seat in their parents' car. Other drivers transporting children under 4 are required to use car seats or available seat belts. A notice to appear citation with a fine of $50 can be issued in violation. The court is authorized to dismiss the charges if the parent/driver demonstrates they have obtained an approved car seat.

The California Highway Patrol issued 6,268 citations statewide during 1983. In the Inland Division of the Child Health Program (San Bernardino County, part of Riverside and Kern Counties), 647 citations were issued in 1983.

According to the California Highway Patrol, since the new law went into effect, 9 percent fewer children under 4 have been killed or injured compared to the same period the year before. The law has also resulted in an increase in the number of children in child restraints according to a study by Dr. Phyllis Agran at University California at Irvine.

To promote the use of car seats and seat belts, San Bernardino County departments of Public Health and Child and Adolescent Health Program are promoting a car seat and seat belt campaign during the months of May, June and July. In addition, throughout the state of California, May 11-18th has been designated as Child Passenger Safety Week.

The health department clinic campaign will be held in nine health clinics throughout San Bernardino County. Information on "Buckle Them Up With Car Seats and Seat Belts" will be presented through displays, posters, stickers and educational material. During the health check-up, the clinic staff will provide important information to parents on car seats for children. Parents will also have the opportunity to obtain a shopping guide which describes the different car seats available and the local stores where they can be found and their prices. Examples of what parents can learn during (Continued on page 20)

No one will win a gold medal at the Olympics in Los Angeles this summer. Bronze and silver, yes, but not gold.

When top athletes from around the world "go for the gold" this summer in Los Angeles, they won't actually be winning gold medals, no matter how good their performance.

The medals awarded to first-place finishers are really silver, coated with 7 grams of pure gold. That's about $70 worth of the precious yellow metal at recent prices.

A troy ounce of gold contains slightly more than 31.103 grams, so there is less than a quarter-ounce of the precious metal applied as an outer layer to give the "gold medal" effect.

The contract for the Olympic medal awards went to A. Josten's Inc., which is striking the medals at a plant in Princeton, Ill. The dies for the medals are being engraved at the firm's Owatonna, Minn., plant. All the medals are approximately 2 1/2 inches in diameter and 3

Dave Fritchey, (above), a Foothill firefighter, has his waist measured for a fitness program required by the district. He was the the biggest "loser" in the program designed for the district's 44 employees.

blaze through fitness program

Six months ago, photographs of an overweight and unenthusiastic Dave Fritchey appeared in the Rancho Cucamonga Times to illustrate a story about the Foothill Fire District's new fitness program.

Time and hard work have changed not only Fritchey's body but his attitude. Thirty-two pounds lighter and much more fit, the exhilarated fire captain says his "whole life has changed."

"I feel 10 years younger. I'm a lot more active. I feel a lot better about myself," he said.

Fritchey, 36, has been named the program's overall "loser." He showed the most radical difference in the pre-testing done in November and the post-testing finished last week.

The 6-foot-tall Rancho Cucamonga resident went from 228 pounds to 194, his waist from 41½ inches to 34½. His body fat decreased from 31.4 percent to 22.9 (ideal for men is 15 percent). His resting heart rate is 66 beats per minute, instead of the previous 72. Blood pressure is down from 120/84 to 100/70.

He began reading books on health and fitness. His wife, Georgiana, began to exercise more, and the family has changed its eating habits, Fritchey said.

While they must be pleased that Fritchey has experienced such positive changes, Foothill Fire directors also are hoping for results that won't be revealed for awhile.

One aim in implementing the mandatory program is longer lives for the employees; the average firefighter, retiring at 55 after 20 years on the job, dies in five to seven years.

Another is to cut down on employee sick time. Illness, and job-related injuries, not only affect those suffering them but the district's pocketbook.

Calculations showed the district has paid $115,813 for on-the-job injuries in the last five years, and an average of $30,400 per year to replace those employees.

The testing and membership at a fitness center for all 44 employees, including secretarial, fire prevention officers and management staff members, cost $14,500. It would cost less in the future, perhaps $8,500 per year, because the pre-testing would never be as extensive, said Battalion Chief Lloyd Almand.

"If we just take the replacement cost and save 50 percent, in five years the program will pay for itself," said Almand.

Not everyone did as well as Fritchey; the average weight loss of those re-tested this month was about 4 pounds, while the goal had been 12 pounds per person.

But weight is only one indicator. Kent

Wilson of Body and Soul Fitness Center, where the district employees have been working out with weights and in aerobic exercise classes, said body fat and pulse rate, both resting and recovering from exercise, are important and often harder to bring down.

One firefighter, 6-foot-2-inch Sam Spagnolo, went from 230 to 219 pounds. More impressively, his resting and recovering heart rate are 50 beats per minutes as opposed to the earlier 68 and 60 respectively.

Spagnolo conceded he did "very little as far as exercising" before the program began. "I feel a lot different, a lot better," he said. "My personal observation is that it's a good program."

Another firefighter, the muscular Jim Sullivan, actually gained six pounds, but it was all muscle, he said.

The employees were subjected to 32 tests. Strength was measured, as were parts of the body like waist and hips. Among the other checks were those for triglycerides, the fatty lipids in the bloodstream that in excess can contribute to diseases such as arteriosclerosis.

The district contracted with Fitness Appraisal, Inc. of San Diego to conduct the tests at Wilson's fitness center, where Almand had been working out. He broached the idea to Wilson, and they negotiated a contract.

Almand said he had heard of the firm when talking with the district's insurance representatives. Foothill Fire District is self-insured with others including San Diego County School District employees, who had been tested by Fitness Appraisal.

Funding was provided by the district's interest earned from investments made on the insurance payments, Almand said. He emphasized that taxpayers are not paying for people to get in shape.

"Some of the people in town don't understand it's not tax money that's paying for this program," he said.

Also, he said, the prizes used as an incentive were not a gift of public funds. The flight to Las Vegas for the Fritcheyes, rented car, limousine and hotel accommodations, and the hotel accommodations for second-place "loser" Capt. Rick Clabby and his wife were donated, Almand said.

There may not be such incentives the next time, but perhaps the results will do, Wilson said. He is hoping the firefighters who expended little effort but still saw changes will be inspired, he said.

Wilson would like the firefighters to think about preventing early deaths "so that when they retire, they'll have something to look forward to, not that after three or five years they'll bite the bullet."

Fire Chief Richard Feuerstein said it was difficult for management personnel to participate as actively as the others. He was unable to become active, but plans to start within the next few weeks, he said.

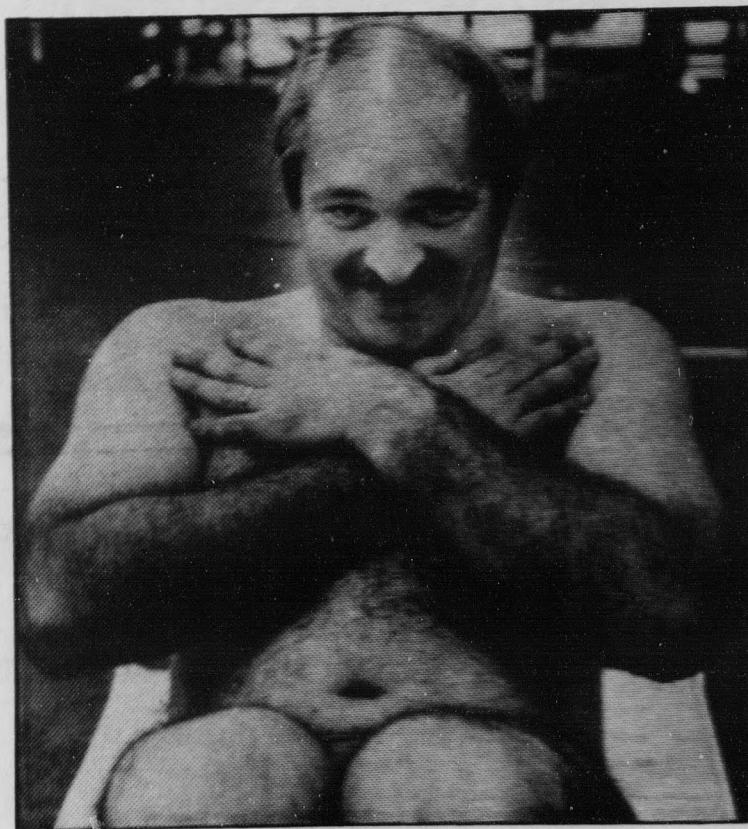

Feuerstein said he hopes the firefighters will have more endurance and stamina as a result of the program.

The fitness program is geared not only for the body, but for stress reduction. That may be decreased further if the psychological aspects of stress can be addressed, Almand said. He is investigating such a supplement to the fitness program.

Fritchey said he has already seen changes in his fellow workers.

"I've noticed on fires, the guys are able to work longer," he said. "They last longer."

He thinks the morning workouts help the firefighters loosen up and resist strain and sprains in their daily work, he said.

A slimmer Fritchey, (above), is able to breeze through the bicycling portion of testing without any huffing or puffing. The firefighter wasn't doing as well last November, (left), when he struggled through sit-ups. He says he still has 10 pounds to lose.

After being struck in Illinois, the medals will be shipped to the company's Santa Barbara, Calif., plant where they will be finished and the neck ribbons attached.

The order for the 1,500 medals — 500 each of the "gold," silver and bronze — is but a small, though obviously prestigious, order for Jostens, which has 30 plants scattered across the country.

The company is striking more than 100,000 medallions, mostly in antique bronze, for Olympic sponsors, suppliers and for sale to the general public.

production of "Rhymes" are Upland High School students Christa Atencio, Eric McKenzie, John Pelletteri, Lisa Pertzborn and Jennifer Shumate along with Brothers who is the group's narrator and musician.

Brothers said this will probably be the last chance area residents will have to see the play.

"Assuming a suitable replacement can be found, I have decided to stop teaching drama at the end of this year," Brothers said. "Since 'Rhymes' exists mostly in my mind and the minds of the students who have performed in it, I doubt that it will every be performed again."

The firm's annual sales are in excess of $300 million, but this year's most prestigious order is for a mere 1,500 medals — medals that will mean so much to world-class athletes.

Perhaps you are not a coin collector, but have come into possession of old or unusual coins left to you in an estate. How do you find out if they are valuable or even authentic?

The obvious answer is to take them to a professional numismatist you can trust. An excellent opportunity to do this is provided by

Scots set for playoffs after winning Baseline

Upland coach Mike Alonso watches play ...

Winning league in his first season at the helm, Upland High School baseball coach Mike Alonso and his team are faced with a tough road in the 1984 CIF-Southern Section 3A playoffs.

After completing a 17-5 season (12-2 in Baseline League competition), the Highlanders must now take on El Dorado of Placentia (15-9, 7-7 in Empire League action) Friday at Memorial Park (starting time pending).

"Hey, this is no slouch team. Nobody did us any favors this time," Alonso said after hearing the first-round draw. "They (El Dorado) have a good front-line pitcher in Bob Blankenship (senior, right-hander, 6-2, 3.66 ERA). His three brothers have gone on to play at Arizona State, Arizona and USC."

Under fourth-year coach Steve Gullotti, the Golden Hawks finished third in the Empire League behind second-place Loara (15-10, 11-3) and champion and 3A second-seed Esperanza (18-5, 11-3).

If Blankenship, who has had his fastball clocked at over 80 mph this year, isn't enough, teammate Jeff Boehlert (Sr., left-hander, 5-2, 1.49 ERA) has 52 strikeouts to his credit thus far this season.

"Hey, we're a good team. We wouldn't be in the playoffs if we weren't," added Alonso. "We'll be there. But we can't take this game lightly. El Dorado's too good a team to do that."

Tom Tondée

and then sometimes has private talks, such as the one with senior Mark Divincenzo.

Netters claim crown

Steve Kobold (right), who finished third in the singles competition at the Baseline League tennis finals, was a key figure this week as Upland High School's tennis team entered the CIF 3A Division playoffs.

The Highlanders, who went unbeaten through 14 matches to claim Baseline League honors, played host to San Clemente, the South Coast League's No. 3 representative, in opening action Tuesday.

San Clemente had beaten Garden Grove 24-4 in a wild card game to earn a berth in the regular 32-team tournament.

A win Tuesday by coach Paul Trautwein's Highlanders would have moved them into a second-round against the winner of the Palm Springs-Riverside Poly clash.

Ex-CC standout enjoys role as Twins' reliever

By Ron Witt

When the curtain closed on the American League regular season last October, Minnesota's Twins ended a dismal sixth in the seven-team Western Division race, 29 games behind the champion Chicago White Sox and 22 games below .500.

As a consequence, there was no real basis for optimism this spring that the occupants of the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome would make any discernible moves toward a contending spot in this year's divisional flag chase.

But the Twins have raised more than a few eyebrows with their improved play in the first two months of the '84 campaign. And after sweeping the California Angels in a three-game series at Anaheim Stadium last week, manager Billy Gardner's charges found themselves in the rarified atmosphere of first place in the A.L. West.

One of the contributors to the club's success thus far has been Mike Walters, the 26-year-old former Chaffey College pitcher who is in his second season as a relief man with the Twins.

Although 0-2 in nine appearances, Walters has registered two saves and sports a sparkling 1.38 earned run average, having allowed just two earned runs in 15 innings.

"The Twins have been very pleased with him," notes Minnesota publicist Tom Mee. "He's used as a kind of safety valve for Ron Davis (the former Yankee).

"Davis pitches much of the time, but he can't go every day. After two or three appearances in a row, he needs a rest, and Mike comes in. He (Walters) has been a very important man on our club.

"He has good control, and being 6-foot-5 and a sidearmer, he's very tough on right-handed batters."

Walters seems to be content with the amount of pitching he's doing.

"It goes in streaks," says Mike. "Once I went three nights in a row when Ron had a blister. Other times I don't get in. It just means I have to throw a lot on the side."

Walters started out in the California Angels' organization after his prep career at Alta Loma and two years at Chaffey College. But was traded to Minnesota in May, 1982, along with outfielder Tom Brunansky in exchange for Doug Corbett and Rob Wilfong.

He divided minor league time with Spokane and Toledo in 1982 and opened the 1983 campaign at Toledo, going 3-0 with a 1.96 ERA for the Mudhens before being called up to the parent Twins on July 1.

He pitched in 23 games for Minnesota over the rest of the season, posting a 1-1 record with two saves and a 4.12 ERA in 59 innings.

"Things have gone pretty good for me since I had arm surgery," says Walters. "I was glad to get out of the Angels' system because they're so veteran oriented. Coming to the Twins was a good deal for me."

Walters says he had set no particular goals for himself this season other than "just making the club" and "doing what I can to help us win."

Can the Twins maintain their present pace?

"It's hard to say," replies Mike. "But

Marin shines for Pan Am

EDINBURG, Tex. — Smooth-hitting Victor Marin ran away with the Triple Crown this baseball season at Pan American University.

The junior right fielder transfer from Chaffey College topped the Broncs in batting average (.371), home runs (nine) and runs-batted-in (43).

Marin's hot bat provided Pan American with its highest average achieved by any regular since Jorge Sanchez hit .397 and Robert Johnson .393 in 1980.

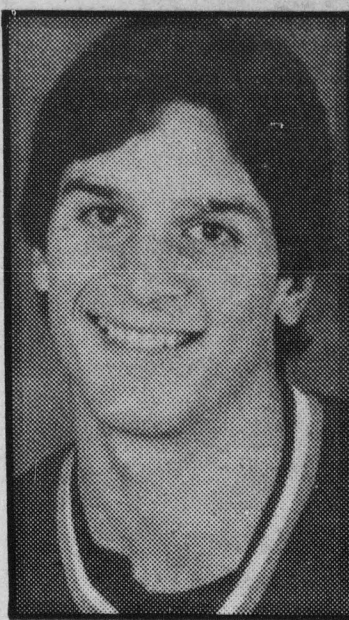

And the Montclair High School product was blazing hot down the homestretch. During a 10-day road trip in April, Marin batted 20-for-40, a sizzling .500, in the home parks of Texas Christian, Oklahoma City and Texas A&M.

Marin also led the Texas team in hits (59) and doubles (12). Heeney showed his speed by leading the club with three triples.

Marin also proved himself a clutch hitter with seven game-winning hits for the Broncs, who finished with a rather disappointing record of 31-27. Under coach Al Olgetree, the Edinburg-based school usually challenges Southwest Conference teams in the NCAA playoffs for a berth in the College World Series.

Not only did Marin dominate the hitting statistics, he also hit safely in 13 straight games—the last nine of them on the road. Beason batted safely in 11 straight games, the team's second longest hitting streak.

Marin, who pitched and played shortstop a year ago at Chaffey, paced the Pan American outfield with eight assists from his right field spot.

Upland advances 8 to CIF track finals

Six boys and two girls will represent Upland High School in the CIF 3A Division track and field finals Saturday.

Site of the competition (for all divisions) is Cerritos College in Norwalk. Field events begin at 11 a.m., and first running events are at noon.

Pole vaulters Mike Smith and John Kufra lead the Highlander boys into action after qualifying at 13-0 in last week's 3A prelims at Valencia High School in Placentia.

Smith, still recovering from a sore ankle, is looking to eclipse the 14-1 he cleared in the Baseline League finals and a 14-6 barrier which he heretofore has been unable to make.

Other Upland boys who will bid for honors are Thomas Allums, Lance Hollis, Cory McCroskey and Cliff Gill, who comprise the Highlanders' 1,600-meter relay team. The Upland quartet turned 3:27.21 last week, good for second place in its heat.

Upland has two female qualifiers in senior Beth McGrann, who was second in her heat of the 3,200 meters (11:24.9), and freshman Glenda Smith, third in her heat of the 800 meters (2:19.15).

Last week's prelims meant the end of the season for some Upland competitors.

Ken Fetters finished third in his heat of the 1,600 meters in 4:29.49 to miss a berth in the finals.

The Highlander 400-meter relay team of Gill, Allums, Tony Brown and Hollis took a non-qualifying fifth in 45.33.

In girls' action, Upland's 1,600-meter relay team comprised of Rene Holiday, Chris Atencio, McGrann and Smith turned 4:18.76 for fifth place.

Karlene Pope and Trish Schell bowed out of the high jump and high hurdles, respectively.

we have been playing pretty good ball. A lot of the guys have more experience now.

"We've had some players injured (slugger Kent Hrbek, John Castino and Dave Engle) recently, but we've still won six in a row so we're showing a little bit of depth."

Although happy with his second major league team, Walters says he isn't ready to make the Minneapolis-St. Paul area his home. "Too cold," he declares with a chuckle.

Walters has been making his off-season home in the Palm Desert area of Palm Springs but is considering moving back to Rancho Cucamonga.

A little preparation can go a long way on bicycle tour

Many people think that a fancy, expensive, specially built bicycle is necessary for bicycle touring. Such is not the case. With the addition of a few accessories, the bicycle you ride to the grocery store can take you across the state or across the country.

Here we assume that you already have a bicycle that is properly sized and adjusted to your needs. For touring, you're better off with a frame having a long wheelbase (41-42 inches between the hub centers), and wheel rims that will accept 27" x 1 1/4" tires. The longer wheelbase smooths out the ride; the heavier duty wheels minimize spoke breakage and flat tires. If you don't have a good range of low gears, they're certainly worth considering, especially if you'll be carrying your own camping equipment in mountainous terrain.

Bicycle tourists use saddlebags called panniers to carry a variety of equipment for touring. Some use a combination of both front and rear panniers, which helps to distribute the weight more evenly. Many cyclists also use a handlebar bag, which offers easy access to snack food, cameras, suntan lotion, etc.

To mount the panniers and handlebar bag on your bicycle you'll need to install racks designed for this purpose. Be sure to get racks that will fit the bags you purchase; there are several designs available. Probably the best buy today are the aluminum Blackburn racks. Get a rack that attaches to the bicycle at as many points as possible to reduce side-to-side sway of the load.

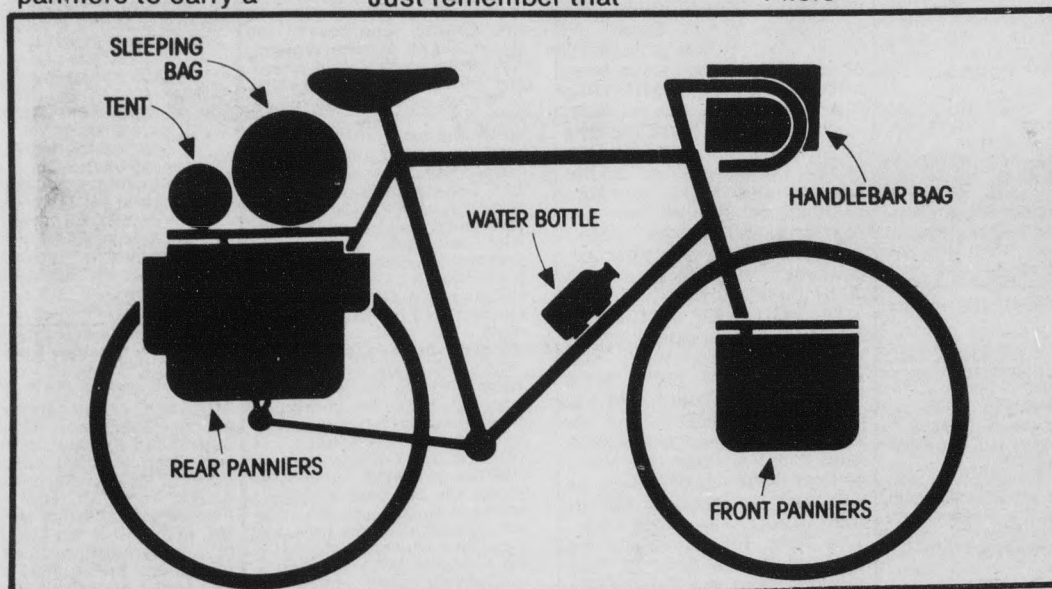

You should plan on carrying no more than 40-50 pounds of equipment on tour. That doesn't sound like a lot of weight for self-contained travel, but you can actually carry quite a few items within that weight limit. Just remember that you're the one who will be pulling that hair dryer or handheld video game up each hill along your route. Then leave the frills at home.

Here's a suggested equipment list for a tour of anywhere up to three weeks. Some items you'll view as optional; you'll probably come up with other items you really want to take along, such as a camera. Just remember to travel light.

Clothing:

- Helmet
- 2 pair Cycling shorts or substitute one pair long pants
- 2 T-shirts
- 1 long-sleeved shirt
- Underwear, socks, cycling shoes, extra shoes
- Sweater
- Rain parka or cape
- Towel, washcloth, toilet articles
- Gloves, wool hat for cold weather riding
- Tools and parts
- 6-inch adjustable wrench
- Small screwdriver
- Pliers

Waitress learns not to give up

consultant guided her to North-West College, which has campuses in Pomona, West Covina and Pasadena.

When Cosentino enrolled at North-West College last October, she was "scared to death. I hadn't been in school for 33 years," she says.

"All I did was cry at first," she recalls. But school counselors urged her to continue, as did a teacher, Lady Sanchez. "If it hadn't been for that woman, many times I think I would have given up," says Cosentino.

Before long Cosentino realized her age gave her an advantage over younger students. "I think my study habits are more mature," she says. After six months, "My brain feels like a sponge. It feels like it's bursting out, like it can't hold any more."

She has attended classes every day, acquiring a perfect attendance record, although the pain sometimes has been intense. "I do get depressed at times," she confesses. "Some days I have an awful lot of pain. But it's another chance — maybe my last chance — to accomplish something."

Next month she will graduate from the West Covina campus as a medical computer specialist.

Armed with her North-West degree and the cheerful disposition that made her popular with restaurant customers in the restaurant, she's eager to work with the public once again.

Her coursework has included insurance billing, secretarial service, medical terminology and anatomy.

Cosentino has discovered she has a special interest in gerontology and hopes she'll find a job that includes helping the elderly.

The long road back to the workforce has been eased by her children's support and enthusiasm, she says. When she earned her high school equivalency degree, her children threw a party. "I got all kinds of gifts, just like I graduated from someplace," she recalls happily. "They're so proud of me."

They tell her she studies too much, that she needs to take more breaks from the books, she says. They also remind her of the advice she gives them when the going gets tough: "Put one foot in front of the other and don't fall back."

"It's like this is a bridge," she says, gesturing. "You're over here. You get to the bridge and you can stop. Or you can go under and fall into a slump."

"Now is my time, now is my big chance to go over the bridge."

BIKECENTENNIAL

Basic Bicycling

- 2 tire irons
- 6 spare spokes to fit your wheel
- Spoke wrench
- Freewheel remover for your hub
- Hex wrenches as needed for your bicycle
- 2 extra tubes and tube repair kit
- Extra set of rear gear and brake cables
- Roll of friction or electrical tape
- Two feet of wire

You may already have some of this equipment if you've done some camping or backpacking in the past. Just remember to keep it light.

Of course, there is another way to tour, and it's one that too many people in this country ignore all together. The English have long been adept at putting together a few necessary items in a small bag that hangs behind the saddle, and setting off for a few days of riding with nights spent at country inns, bed and breakfast establishments, etc.

You can do the same. There's no reason to define bicycle touring as traveling self-contained. The idea is to enjoy yourself on a bicycle trip. If that means traveling with little more weight than a bank car, then by all means plan your trip that way. (A quick hint for those of you who plan to use indoor accommodations: carry a small plastic drop cloth. If a motel owner balks at the idea of your having your bicycle in the room, quickly mention that you always lay out the dropcloth.)

Utility offers to help keep gas bill down

Sixty-six million therms is enough energy to serve the needs of about 73,000 residential customers for one year. (A therm is a unit of heating value used in billing natural gas service and is roughly equal to 100 cubic feet of gas.)

The utility's service people will visit homes and apartments, free of charge, to turn the pilot off and to demonstrate how to safely turn it on again when the weather turns cool in the fall.

More information on ways to save natural gas this summer can be obtained by calling the gas company's toll-free hotline at 1-800-352-4124.

Toastmistress Club will sharpen skills

The West End Toastmistress Club will hold a coffee meeting Tuesday, May 22 at La Cheminee restaurant in Ontario at 7 p.m.

For additional information, or to make a reservation, call Gloria DeSart, president, at 988-3300 days and 986-4477 evenings.

The goals of the Toastmistress organization is to sharpen speaking and listening skills, develop hidden potential and to teach the correct way to hold a business meeting.

Community theater planned to take place this summer

An International Community Theater Festival will take place this summer at the Gallery Theater in Barnsdall Park in Los Angeles.

Co-sponsored by the City of Los Angeles and the Southern California Educational Theater Association, with local arrangements handled by the South Bay Center for the Performing Arts, the event is open to local community theater groups from throughout the state.

Prior to the international event will be the Southern California Community Theater Festival, which will be sponsored by the Community Theater Division of the SCETA. This festival, to be held June 29, 30 and July 1, will result in the naming of up to three groups to represent the United States in the international festival scheduled for July 12, 13, 14 and 15.

Further information and applications forms are available by contacting Clara Louvier, director of theater programs for the City of Los Angeles, at (213) 665-5148 or (213) 662-6378, or Meique Weinstein, vice president community theater division of SCETA, at 538-7515.
